

Avalanche on SE bowl of Flanders

Date

Sat, 01/20/2024 - 14:42

Activity

Skiing

Snow was heavy and glopping on our way up to the basin. Our plan remained the same all day - ski the skiers left trees of the SE bowl in Flanders. Once in the Alpine, lack of snow in the area led to slow, rock hitting skiing, one of our partners took a turn a bit more right of original ski line. I was waiting up higher in a safe position, and watched as he turned into the bowl, a remote triggered avalanche ripped out above him. He was fast to reach a safe position in the trees by the time the avalanche finished its ride. The photo shows the 3 ski tracks, and the most left one is what remote triggered above.

Region

Northern Gallatin

Location (from list)

Flanders Creek